

I Am Mayukhi...

I am a tiger, waiting for its prey, lurking, pouncing,
I am a swift river, snaking through mountains and slithering through dense, emerald forests,
I am a calm ocean, sleeping and sensing the world.
I am an earthquake, with crumbly buildings and unstable structures, falting,
I am an arrow, flashing through barren fields and bullseyeing to the target,
I am a redwood, reaching to feel all the bell-rings and door-slams
I am a rainbow, made up of colors, like red and widdle-wap, words about to be said,
I am a star that shines brighter than the sun, blinding other planets and burning comets,
I am a new-book, enticing, lounging, and tempting,
I am a picture, canvased with a mixture of colors,
I am a flower, blood roses and snow lilies, bluebells and yellow daffodils, blooming- I grow,
I am a kite, feathering to freedom and jellyfishing through the clouds,
I am me, a not-so-perfect, parrot-color, balloon-pop, fluffy-candy person,
You see- I am alive, I am alive,
I sing with the bees,
I dance with the fireflies,
I twirl with the swaying trees,
I kite with the flying birds, blending in, but standing out,
You see- I am alive, I am alive.
